For the ultimate Maharaja experience.
A ROYAL RETREAT

Few places in the world celebrate over-the-top extravagance quite like India does. For the ultimate Maharaja experience, head to Rajasthan’s historical palaces where there’s an abundance of opulence and pampering.

STORY AMRITA BHAL
There’s no better place in India to experience fine luxury than in the state of Jodhpur — a region not only rich in culture, but also steeped in royal heritage and traditions.

The best way to experience the region is to submerge yourself in the lavish use of the blue — a color that dominates the landscape, built into the city’s fabric, and is deeply embedded in its culture. Jodhpur is also known as the Blue City due to the prominence of its buildings in the city that are painted blue.

TO THE PALACE

Although there are several palaces in the city, only one of them is a true palace, and that is the Suján Palace, which was once the residence of the ruling family of Jodhpur. The palace is located in the heart of the city, in the heart of the old market, and is surrounded by the city’s fortifications.

“The staff is part of the royal family’s private household. Our aim is to run it like a palace, rather than a hotel.”

— Suján Singh, Owner
